

ULLA MOLIN'S GARDEN IN HÖGANÄS!

Listed garden (by the Swedish National Heritage Board)

The garden was created by Ulla Molin (1909–1997), a famous Swedish garden architect, journalist and author. Today it remains as a model for garden architects and private people: functionalist style, influenced by the English Arts & Crafts and Japanese garden art and beautiful all year round. There is a calm colour scheme using whites, greens, greys and blues. Ulla Molin was one of the first to use ground-covering plants. Many examples can be found in the garden with surrounding hedges. Admire the groups of shaped plants, the shallow circular pond for the birds and woodland walk with wild cherry plum trees.

Ulla Molin was a strong believer in linking outdoor & indoor spaces. It is simple, elegant and natural style. The Höganäs garden, Ulla Molin's third and final garden, is considered to be her masterpiece and listed garden since 2010 (one of only 3 private listed gardens in Sweden).

The current owners since 2007 are Hans Ljungström and Christina Ekman-Ljungström. Hans is a retired surveyor and Christina has travelled the world marketing water purification. Hans enjoys golf, jiu-jitsu and cookery in his leisure time. Christina enjoys riding, genealogical research and training her dog. And of course their common and overwhelming interest is maintaining their garden according to Ulla Molin's philosophy, so that it can act as a source of inspiration for coming generations. Welcomes 2,000–3,000 visitors per year, both private and from gardening courses.
